Dear Colleague

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to the BASHH Spring Meeting in Bristol. I am especially delighted that the meeting is in Bristol as this is where I spent my undergraduate years. I have every expectation that the next few days will be similar to my years at medical school, intellectually stimulating and informative, surrounded by bright, inquisitive, people whose company is enjoyable, exhausting due to the accumulation of late nights and early mornings, but proving to be a thoroughly good time.

The programme includes renowned keynote speakers covering important and challenging topics in addition to the oral presentations and posters selected by the scientific committee, and of course the ever-popular debate. The conference takes place shortly after the move of sexual health commissioning to Local Authorities and part of the programme will focus on the potential consequences of this.

As always there has been a great deal of hard work to make this meeting a success. I would like to thank Daniel Richardson & Elizabeth Foley the BASHH Conference Secretaries, and Peter Greenhouse, the local host, for their untiring diligence. They have put together a varied and exciting scientific programme and entertaining social functions.

Bristol is of course a beautiful and historic city. As the conference is being held in the city centre we should all get the opportunity to see some of the landmark sites. I wish you an enjoyable and inspiring conference and I hope you leave Bristol with the same fond memories that I did all those years ago.

With best wishes

We hope you are able to combine learning, friendship and enjoyment at this conference.

With Best wishes

Janet Wilson
